I have a younger sister, (Name of sister) who is currently completing her undergraduate studies in Data Science at New Light University.

Owing to my consistent involvement in my family business, I was motivated to understand the dynamics of the same. This passion and my remarkable academic history enabled me to pursue my bachelor's program in Business Administration at one of the finest business schools in my home country. I kept up my academic passion of garnering as much as I can to absorb the nuances of the curriculum. I was very fascinated by numbers and thus chose to specialise in Finance and Accounting in my final year. I topped the batch in subjects like Financial Analysis, Financial Management, Forecasting and Budgeting owing to my particular interest in this arena. To add onto my skills and knowledge, I completed certificate courses from online and offline platforms. Together with my academic pursuits, I was able to participate in various business idea fests and volunteer at an NGO to develop entrepreneurial opportunities for underserved women.

On earning my bachelor's degree with top marks, I joined Fintech Corp as a Finance Intern. Applying my technical skills and gaining more insight into the financial sector helped solidify my passion for this sector. I completed my three month internship in the credit department after which I joined as a Finance Analyst at FinServ, a multinational financial institution. Here, I was responsible for going through various investment datasets, preparing ROI reports, providing data-oriented financial advice and communicating the same with senior management. I became adept in SAP, Quickbooks, Tally and developed my communication, problem solving and research abilities.

At this point of my career, I believe that I need to work on my knowledge and skills further to keep up with the highly volatile finance industry. A Master's degree in Finance from a global institution housed in a developed country will help me avail higher calibre learning experiences than what my home country can offer.

I am indebted to them for being the source of inspiration and motivation in achieving all milestones till date. In the short term, I want to work at multinational finance institutions near my hometown and interact with global teams in the mid managerial level. After gaining enough exposure managing teams and crafting innovative financial solutions, I intend to set up a financial consultancy firm of my own. I aim to strengthen small and medium scale businesses in my hometown with data and research based financial strategies.

I am fortunate for a loving family who have agreed to partly finance my education in Ireland. The rest is covered by a student loan of XXXXX.
